

The Betty Letters

My Dear Grandchild,

For what reason would a man want to marry another man? For what reason would a woman want to marry another woman? It is a useless exercise. Nothing can come of it. I cannot understand it, for the life of me. Two backs can never make one front. I have noted that the Vatican is appalled that some countries are, today, recognising same-sex marriages. Same-sex marriages are, definitely, wrong: The Vatican is definitely correct. If we allow such things, then, the natural extension is life, that is human life, would, eventually, cease to exist. As I have already stated: Two backs can never make one front. Aside from Immaculate Conception (The Doctrine that the Virgin Mary was conceived, free from all stain of Original Sin – that is, Mary, having it off with the benefit of the tools of Joseph of Nazareth), it is clear that an orgasm, caused by homosexual stimulation, does not result in conception, leading to birth. I noted that some gays stormed the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Hongkong, the other month, following the Vatican, calling on the Catholic Faithful to apply pressure on governments, worldwide, not to endorse same-sex marriages. Pope John Paul II has issued a Directive to his underlings, worldwide, that they must apply pressure to make certain that governments of the world do not follow the path of Canada. Canada, you know, is legislating same-sex marriages. It, probably, has something to do with the fact that it can become bitterly cold in many parts of that northern country, and the human body is, more often than not, in the heart of winter, the best hot-water bottle for males and females. Cuddling is one way to keep warm, but it can lead to homosexuality when accidental titillation of the genitals takes place. But for what reason would people of the same sex want to touch each other, by design, in the nether parts? God never made us that way: There is a male; and, there is a female; and, the male is constructed so that he can plant his seed inside the female. This is the natural path of things: It is not back-to-back, but front to front. By the way, do you think that Canada's Prime Minister, Mr Jean Chrétien, is a closet gay? Perhaps, deep down, he likes it from another man? In China, there is no chance of same-sex marriages, taking place – because there are no gays in China. Our statistics have proved that to be the case. However, having said that, I have noted that some Chinese cows are engaging in Original Sin with other Chinese cows. Somebody should tell the cows that, if they are feeling randy, they should seek the pleasure of a bull, not another cow. Also, I have been told that certain male monkeys in China are engaging in sexual intercourse with their opposite numbers – without considering the consequences of those acts, on their partners, or on the humans, who seem to be enjoying, watching the show in zoos in the Motherland. I have talked to some of my friends in Beijing and we, all, agree that the directors of zoos ought to keep such activities out of the sight of visitors. According to Grandpa, if more people adopted Confucianism, homosexual tendencies would be cured, just like a bad cold.

On a completely different subject, I have noted that soon-to-be, Prime Minister of Singapore, Brigadier Lee Hsien Loong, the son of the Paramount Leader of the Island Republic, Mr Lee Kuan Yew, is planning another shake-up in the Singapore Civil Service. That is really good news. Now, Hongkong can follow Singapore's example. It is not just a question of cutting back on civil servants' pay, but, also, there must be a method by which the Administration can force out of the civil service, some of the old farts – the 'fat', in other words. Deputy Prime Minister Lee Hsien Loong – as is his present designation – has gone on record as stating: 'Wage restructuring is a painful medicine, but it will make our economy, healthier and fitter.' Great stuff, don't you think? I like this man. In fact, I think I like him much more than his oppressive father, who led Singapore as Mr Toughie, between 1959 and 1990. Do you know that Minister Lee Kuan Yew never lost a libel suit that he launched, during his 31 years as Prime Minister of the Republic. It is so nice to be right, don't you think? Right is Might, you know.

*Must go now.
As always, I am,*

The Chief Lady of Hongkong
