

The Betty Letters

My Dear Grandchild,

I must tell you of an incident that took place in Jerusalem, recently, when a number of men and women were stripped and searched by Jewish security personnel, both males and females. Some of the men, I have been told, were strip-searched, right down to the goolies. I guess that is one way to discover whether or not a man is a Jew or a gentile. I wonder whether or not those people, searching the private parts of men's anatomies, were video-taping the searches. Such videos would be interesting to view, don't you think? The video recordings would be superior to finger-printing individuals because, according to Bo-Bo, my froglike husband, every man's goolies are unique: There are no 2 goolies that are similar except for the function of being part of the delivery system for sperm and urine. I did not know this, before, because I only know of one set of goolies and so I have had no way to compare one with another. It has been reported that the reason for the numerous strip-searches was because of security screening measures at a 5-star hotel, cocktail reception where Israel's Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu was present. If any man or woman with a valid invitation did not agree to the invasive body searches, then, they were banned from attendance at this supposedly premier function.

I have never been to Israel, but I have been told that the security personnel at Israeli airports are as rough as they come. According to The Frog, he would never fly on an Israeli aeroplane because, among other things, he has never been circumcised and a Jewish Sabra might suggest that The Frog is only be pretending to be an ethnic Chinese, even though he has very pronounced slitty eyes (in the words of Prince Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, the husband of Elizabeth II) as have most Shanghainese men. 'I! Go to Israel?' The Frog giggled when I told him of the invasive body searches of men and women at the Jerusalem cocktail party. 'I like to eat pork and I, also, eat eels and shell fish, both of which are not considered kosher. I would starve if I went to Israel. And I am not taking down my pants for any Jewish security man or woman to view ... unless I am paid to perform a striptease.' I told him that he looks much better, dressed in clothes, than being naked.

I think that the Jewish State of Israel is going a little too far, these days. I fully understand how afraid are the Jews of terrorists, especially those terrorists who are sponsored by al Qaeda, but the latest piece of intelligence with regard to strip-searching people, attending a cocktail reception, is a little over the top. There is the matter, also, of the ladies, who were strip-searched at this reception. At least one of them was 4 months' pregnant and she, allegedly, asked not be screened by a metal detector because of the possibility of harming the fetus of the unborn child. The Jewish security people took no notice of this expectant mother's requests. That is really nasty. I do not know if the metal prod can hurt the fetus, but if I had been that mother, I would have just walked away from the reception rather than put my unborn baby in harm's way. X-rays are known to be harmful to a fetus and no pregnant mother would be X-rayed, knowing that she had conceived. Then, it stands to reason that the probability exists that any electromagnetic resonance device can be harmful to a fetus, too. I wonder whether or not official receptions, organised by Eastern potentates, are conducted in a like manner to that of the Jewish one, recently held in Jerusalem.

In my opinion, Jews and Arabs deserve each other, anyway. If you get 2 Jews together and ask them to solve a single problem, you are certain to get at least 3 solutions. The same is true of a like scenario with 2 Arabs, being asked to solve a single problem. What I could never understand was the reason that God picked the Jews to be the 'Chosen People'. Why did not God select the Chinese? We bathe more regularly than most other races and we, definitely, have the best cuisine. Anyway, we are the most-populous people on earth and, soon, we shall be the Number One economy on earth. On this same subject, it is fact that the Jews have made, and continue to make, contributions to the human race, far exceeding their numbers. The Jews are, really, an extraordinary race: They have given the world some of the greatest leaders and brains of all time – Jesus Christ, Karl Marx, Albert Einstein, Rabbi Abraham Geiger, to name but 4 great thinkers. But for all of their great intelligence, Jews rarely follow any of the great teachings of the people who sprang from their loins. It is sad, is it not?

Well, talk to you, next week.

Chief Lady
